Obstruction Gives Way To Broad-Minded Views

By J. W. MARCHBANK
(Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work)

There is such a thing as enlightened selfishness, a mode of life in which you give the other fellow a chance, and signs of the times are distinctly in that direction. "Big Business" is at last on the right track.

It was heartening to hear the familiar voice of A. P. Giannini, founder of the Bank of America, and at present both its president and chairman of the Board, on a nationwide broadcast the other night. Not only that, it was the whole tone of his talk that was decidedly encouraging. The San Francisco man of affairs called upon citizens everywhere, including those possessed of millions, to get back of President Roosevelt in his wonderful effort to restore security and happiness to this great land.

"A. P." a remarkable fine performer at the "mike"—pertinently enough pointed out most of the leaders of industry, business, and finance, supported the chief executive in the period immediately following the bank holiday and expressed in ringing terms his heartfelt hope they would do so again in the time of partial recovery.

Something more to think about. In a copyrighted article in the Sacramento Bee furnished by the McClure Syndicate I read:

"The utilities remain more implacably anti-New Deal than any other financial or business element. Most other branches of conservative industry are edging into a sort of reluctant co-operation with Washington and even the bankers have tacitly decided there are healthier pastimes than defying the lightning."

That "lightning" is good. Getting away from metaphorical language the point is that industry sees the President is taking care of the interests of the country first and all the time and that it is not healthy to get in his way when occupied with carrying out his patriotic policy.

Earle W. Knight, managing editor of The Alaska Weekly, took a week off lately, but still his very readable column "As We See It" appeared in the last issue of the sprightly publication. For some time Knight has been trying to figure out the why and whereof of plans of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace for crop reduction. He is a staunch supporter of the President, but that does not tie his hands when they itch for a little tapping on his typewriter keys on the anomaly of millions being hungry while there was so much food large quantities had to be destroyed. Frankly enough he does not claim to be wiser than the officials at Washington in trying to straighten things out. To explain his position he says:

"When Oliver Herford was a dramatic critic an irate playwright asked him what he knew about plays, adding, 'You can't even write one.'"

"No," said Oliver 'I can't lay an egg either but I know when one is rotten.'"

"That's the dilemma with which I am faced along with countless millions. We are pretty sure that some of the brain trust stuff is a little rotten even if we do not know just how we would do any better with it."

Everywhere editor Knight went on a recent tour in British Columbia he found a buzz of mining talk and in an editorial gives a tip to Seattle merchants that intelligent support of mines and of the mining possibilities of Washington and of Alaska would work wonders in Seattle. San Francisco found long ago that the mining industry is a true foundation for the prosperity of the people.

Junipera Serra Boulevard Extension

New Road Proving Popular With Auto Drivers From All Parts of State

Unit C of Section 1 of Junipero Serra Boulevard Extension, now completed and opened to traffic, that beautiful stretch of modern highway that eliminates Colma congestion and cuts off the San Mateo county cemeteries, has taken rank as the most popular drive down the peninsula from San Francisco, according to county and state highway officials.

Perhaps, just perhaps, one reason for the new road's popularity is the fact that Unit C, spreading its broad expanse of lanes for two miles, from Edgemar Road to El Camino Real, beyond Cypress Lawn, did not cost the tax-payers a penny, the $210,000 construction cost being paid entirely by the Federal government from N. R. A. funds. And of the $45,000 spent for rights of way the state donated $20,000 and the remainder came from a balance in the funds of Joint Highway District No. 10, comprised of San Francisco and San Mateo counties.

Small wonder that thousands of tax-payers of both counties are riding in great glee over the new road and singing the praises of the highway district commissioners who negotiated the deal. The commission includes Supervisor Al Witt of Daly City, and Supervisors Al Roncovieri and Andrew Gallagher, chairman, of San Francisco. The trio is now maneuvering for Federal government funds to finance construction of the first unit of Section 2, extending for about three miles to the Sneath Road at Tanforan, preliminary plans for which are ready.

The district commissioners are planning a public ceremony in celebration of the completion of Section 1, the date of which will be announced in a few days.

Thousands of motorists are daily enjoying the thrill of rolling unimpeded across the old School street turn at Colma, which jammed traffic for many years, into a straight-a-way course through Unit B and over Unit C to El Camino Real. An underpass and bridge at Washington street eliminate local traffic and cross traffic from Mission street to Sharp Park and the Skyline Boulevard. City Engineer John J. Casey, of San Francisco drew the plans and specifications for Unit C. McDonald, James and King were the contractors and Chief Engineer John H. Skeggs of the State Highway Commission supervised the work.

Unit B, completed recently, but not opened until Unit C was finished, covers three quarters of a mile from School street to Edgemar Road. Unit A, from Sloat Boulevard to School street, 3.1 miles was completed in 1929.

KIDNAPING TRIO IS FOILED WHEN VICTIM SHOUTS

Daly City Youth Is Robbed And Then Taken For Ride In Own Car

Three youths were captured on the San Mateo-Hayward Bay Bridge, by highway patrolmen, last Saturday after robbing a San Francisco bank teller. The plot failed when Wesley Strong, 27, son of Dwight Strong of Bellevue avenue, the victim, leaped from the automobile of his captors at the toll gate, shouting, "Arrest these men; they are kidnapping me." The officers and bridge attendants surrounded the trio, who surrendered without resistance. All were unarmed.

The youths were identified as Thomas Hogan, 19, of Niantic avenue; Archie Bigazzi, 16, of Los Banos avenue, and Natchie Mendola, 16, of Niantic avenue, Daly City.

The alleged kidnapers were captured and held incommunicado in the San Mateo County jail, while the district attorney and his deputies subjected them to a grueling examination.

Strong was set upon, robbed and handcuffed, as he was returning from the beach where he had been swimming to the Olympic Club house, where his car was parked.

He was making a short cut across the Olympic Golf Course in Lakeside in San Francisco.

Louis Larson of San Francisco happened upon the group just as they were robbing Strong of his money. The trio, becoming frightened, hurled Strong into his own car and drove off with their victim.

The original plan of the young gangsters did not include kidnapping

Open Road To Progress

Education Always Largest Problem Confronting Any Community
(By Maude Larue Ives)

Before and after the American Revolution our pioneer ancestors clearly saw what an important part education would have to play in the building of our nation. In 1787 Thomas Jefferson said: "Above all things, I hope the education of the common people will be attended to."

George Washington, in his famous farewell address of 1796, said: "Promote then, as an object of primary importance, institutions for the general diffusion of knowledge."

Benjamin Franklin, through his life, was deeply interested in extending and improving education.

In those early times, the public schools were attended only by orphans and children whose parents were too poor to pay tuition fees. The children of well to do parents who could pay these fees, were tutored in special schools and received the better training.

The American people were not satisfied with these conditions and, during the century and a half since the Revolutionary War, some remarkable changes have been produced in education as for example:

School attendance has been made compulsory, by legislation through the elementary grades, or until the child is fourteen, sixteen or even eighteen years of age, depending upon the state.

2. Education above primary levels is now regarded as the right of the children of all the people instead of a certain few.

The little red school houses of the past have been replaced by safe and sanitary buildings, modern in every way, and most of them structures of beauty.

Our government, realizing our great need, has opened up the road of educational progress for the citizens of Daly City, offering us a liberal loan and a substantial outright gift so that we may build three new school

Tuning In On The Future

NEWLY FORMED DEFENDERS LEAGUE MEETS
(By Maude Larue Ives)

Every City Needs Municipal Band—And Ours Needs Only New Uniforms

We are standing on a crowded sidewalk in our world of tomorrow. The band is passing by. As the cheering subsides, we hear a bystander say: "Daly City must be an up and coming place to support a band like that."

"Not only can they play, but they surely know their stuff when it comes to marching."

"Their uniforms too, are so distinctive, and how the gold braid shines in the sun."

One may often hear remarks like these about other city bands, and why should not the same be said in praise of such a band for us?

We need to feel an emotional patriotic thrill every now and then—to be aroused out of our work-a-day lethargy; and what can do more to enliven any situation than a band.

Our band consists of thirty talented musicians, who are practicing regularly, and can they play! Just listen in some Tuesday evening at the City Hall and judge for yourselves. They can drill and march like trained soldiers. But such display of team work can only be appreciated when those taking part are properly uniformed.

Let's all put our shoulders to the wheel, and do out bit to build up a Band Uniform Fund. Our boys will then be fully equipped and ready to ADVERTISE AND BOOST DALY CITY—OUR MUNICIPAL BAND.

The members of the band are willing and ready at all times to give their services for any municipal function of whatever nature, and they deserve the support of all public spirited citizens.

We should not expect nor allow a few to carry this burden—to benefit the entire community. All should "chip in" and do their part.

(Editor's Note: The matter of endorsing and assisting the movement to secure uniforms for the band has been brought before the city council, and no doubt that body will act favorably in the near future.)

BAY MEADOWS TO OPEN SUNDAY FOR INSPECTION

The new Bay Meadows race course will be opened for public inspection Sunday, October 28, and several thousand persons from all parts of the bay area are expected to visit the plant.

The $250,000 totalisator, the first to be installed on the Pacific Coast and the fifth in America, will be in working order and issue sample tickets to demonstrate how it operates. The machine, a mechanical marvel, tabulates wagers and otherwise performs betting operations in a fraction of the time required by humans and with no possibility of error. It flashes the latest odds at one minute intervals, keeping the public constantly informed on wagering trends.

Early comers will be able to see some of the most famous handicap horses in America go through their training gallops on the mile oval. Wise Daughter, the filly that defeated the great Cavalcade last season in the Saratoga Sales Stake and won eight other important features, will be on the track. Marooned, the L. J. Marks star, which won its last five starts, including a decision over Mati Hari, this year's Kentucky Derby favorite, is another that will be under saddle. These two are pointing for the opening day Stockton Handicap, to be run Saturday, November 3.

Gay World, J. A. Nix's Chicago Derby winner; Pillow Fight and Tea Trader, D. J. Davis' Australian stars; San Luis Rey and Sir Ridgeway, the Cooper Brothers' leading western two-year-olds; Beverly Hills, Clark Gable's fleet filly; Ridgeview, G. E. Ewins' big chestnut mare that won five straight at Chicago; and several other noted horses will be galloping or breezing early Sunday morning in preparation for the coming stake events.

Horse trains from the east are arriving daily. Colonel Phil T. Chinn, the leading American breeder in 1928, 1929 and 1932 and third on the list last year, is a recent arrival. G. E. Ewins, who bought the extensive Mickel stable of thirty-seven head, arrived from Rockingham Park the first of the week.

It is expected that Bay Meadows meeting, bringing together the leading horses of so many tracks, will be the deciding ground for several division championships.

SUPERVISED PLAY

"A suitable place to play, affording activities suited to the varying needs of the individual, is the right of every child."

Human "Leather" Used to Bind French Book

A book bound in skin taken from the shoulders of a woman is to be presented to the French National library. Years ago, when the late Camille Flammarion, the astronomer, was a youth, he danced with the lady of the shoulders. And as he danced he whispered flattering comments on their whiteness and loveliness. Months later Flammarion received a copy of the lady's will and a note from her doctor advising him of her death. Then came a package containing the skin. The doctor, in accordance with her will, had removed the skin from her shoulders. It was tanned and treated, and then used to cover the book "La Pluralité des Mondes." That was in 1882. The book, still in perfect condition, is now in the possession of Mme. Flammarion, but will shortly go to the French National library.

Climbing Pike Peak

At the time of the discovery, Zebulon Pike expressed the positive opinion that the Colorado peak named in his honor was so high that it never would be climbed. Automobiles now race to its summit over a perfect speedway.

For good digestion

—there is nothing that can take the place of your own gastric, digestive secretions. Frequently, poor digestion is due to lack of tone in the stomach walls—because of low blood strength. S.S.S., the great, scientifically-tested medicine, is specially designed to fill a two-fold purpose in this respect...it aids in stimulating the flow of natural stomach secretions...and by building up deficient red corpuscles, with their hemoglobin, it restores to a more normal functioning the secretions of the stomach digestive juices...so necessary for good digestion. This double value of S.S.S. is important. By all means try S.S.S. for better health and more happiness. Its benefits are enduring...accumulative...and progressive. Unless your case is exceptional, you should soon enjoy again the satisfaction of appetizing food and good digestion...sound sleep...and renewed strength. This is why many say "S.S.S. makes you feel like yourself again."

Do not be misled by the efforts of a few unethical dealers who may suggest substitutes. You have a right to insist that S.S.S. be supplied you on request. Its long years of preference is your guarantee of satisfaction.

California News of the Week

San Jose reports net sales increase of its wholesale establishments have increased 27 per cent over 1929, the supposed peak of prosperity year.

Good wine, 9400 gallons of it, was sold at a Los Angeles auction conducted by the government. The government netted slightly less than a cent a gallon for the sale.

Delegates of the 16th annual convention of the California Circulation Managers' Association met in Stockton last week. Ways of increasing newspaper appeal were discussed.

Assessor's and collector's offices at El Centro have issued 23,525 tax statements for the Imperial Valley district. This is an increase of 1000 over last year.

Jim Dixon, noted mining character of the Mother Lode district, reported to police that he had been bound and robbed of all his prize nuggets and souvenirs, the result of half a century's collecting in California mining regions.

Vernon "Lefty" Gomez sailed October 20, along with other major league ball players, to play the American game in the Orient. Lefty visited his home in Rodeo, California, just before he left.

Judge Neal Chalmers has summoned 100 Yolo county citizens for prospective jury duty in the trial of J. C. Doke for the murder of Lamar Hollingshead, October 30. The triangle which led to the murder of the University of California poet last July 26, attracted nationwide interest.

Aimie Semple McPherson, evangelist, appeared in a Riverside court seeking to regain from the Riverside Evangelistic Association title to the church property formerly held in the name of her religious organization. The Riverside congregation seceded from the "mother church" two years ago.

With Governor Frank Merriam and Mayor Angelo Rossi of San Francisco welcoming them with speeches, 3500 delegates of the Eastern Star, largest women's fraternal order in the world, met in the bay city last week. Delegates from all over the state attended.

First votes for California governor have already been cast, along with other propositions on the November 6 ballot. Voters who can prove they will be out of town on election day are being given privileges of "absent voter's" ballots. Also, in San Francisco are nine voting machines which are being used by those making affidavit that they will be away during election.

The third district court of appeals at Sacramento declined to hold that 3.2 per cent beer is intoxicating. Arthur Treppa, charged with selling a Lake county Indian intoxicating liquor, is free. The court held that the 3.2 beer was a non-intoxicant. The decision is expected to have far-reaching results in defining the law.

Superior Judge Allen of Visalia has issued an edict that drunken drivers in Tulare county will henceforth be both jailed and fined. Intoxicated driving cases, he says, now require half the time of the courts.

President Roosevelt has declined a bequest of $1000 made to him in the will of Leon Grant McBurney of Los Angeles. Another bequest of the will gives $1000 to Joseph Stalin, Russia's leader.

SERA is playing Pied Piper at Santa Barbara because City Health Officer Dr. W. H. Eaton declared the growing rodent population a serious health menace besides doing $100,000 property damage annually. The federal government is contributing $2300 for labor and the city is paying $700 for poison, traps, and bait, plus $240 for supervision.

As for the sensational charges that the Los Angeles voters' rolls contain "100,000 or more" illegal registrations, Secretary of State Frank C. Jordan says the registration system of California is a conspicuous failure. Aware that county clerks find it impossible to keep cancellations abreast of changes of residences, deaths and failure to vote, Secretary Jordan favors return to the old system of biennial registration each election year.

After prisons in three states had refused him permission to experiment with executed criminals, Dr. Robert E. Cornish has received the offers of two men who are willing to have the doctor kill them and attempt to restore them to life by the methods he used on his famous canine patients. One volunteer is a prisoner under sentence of death and the other is an aged and crippled policeman.

J. W. Caution has completed an artesian well 15 miles northeast of Brawley which produce water at a temperature of 126 degrees. The flow, 60 gallons a minute, was obtained at a depth of 1073 feet. This is by far the hottest well in the vicinity.

"The man who can't be fired" is back in his office again. This is the second time that Dr. Harold Morrison, San Mateo county health officer, has been illegally ousted and has returned to his post. Politics has caused the friction.

New Cloth Coats of Distinction

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THAT which intrigues most about the new coats is that the styling given them is so refreshingly versatile and unusual, so entirely departing from the rank-and-file. For the tall, the short, the slender and the stout, there is a coat suited to every silhouette. Loose hanging-from-the-shoulder lines are as favored as are the sleek form-fitting effects.

As to sports coats, generally speaking, they are divided into two types, the swaggar sort, many belted across the front with loose flowing back, and the ulster. In regard to the swaggar coat the newer versions are often seven-eighths long, whereas last season the three-quarter length prevailed. As to the new ulsters (mostly of strikingly handsome tweed or herring bone wools) a distinguishing note is the big director's revers which carry a most convincing style message. It is as smart for your cloth ulster to be unfurled as furred and vice versa. Big fur revers are very good style, as also are the new fur bib effects. Then, too, the separate fur capelet which is such a popular idea looks well with the cloth ulster. The newest separate fur neckpieces can be worn as a scarf or the ends brought around to the back and fastened, thus affording, to all appearance, an elaborate trim to the coat.

Big news in regard to fur-trimmed coats is "the coat with a muff." All the leading coat departments are making a feature of this very practical and attractive idea.

To strike the new note in coats, your fur collar must bend or flare well away from the throat. Which is a very practical comfortable thing for it to do, especially when one happens to be in a warm room. Another outstanding trend is the fur collar which ripples about the neckline. Summing up the situation fur collars are inclined to be rather fanciful and ornate on the new coats.

A leading fashion is the gilet front which is fashioned of fur. You see the idea illustrated in the coat to the left in the picture. It is possible to buy these detachable fur gilets or vests separately. However, in this instance, the fur front is made part of the coat. The model pictured is especially noteworthy in that the astrakhan which forms the gilet and the cuffs is dyed green to match the cloth it trims. Dyed fur is a favorite theme among those who are seeking, as most of us are, for new thrills.

Quilted effects are also creating quite a little excitement, the idea being played up in all sorts of interesting ways. Looking at the coat centered in the group, one visions refreshingly new happenings in the way of cloth treatments. This handsome model is a French import, a Bruyere creation. Here the designer gives us a detachable shoulder cape made of the same gray cloth as the coat. The handsome wool coating has been quilted in a most decorative manner.

In the model to the right of heavy black woolen we see something new for afternoon coats as launched by Schiaparelli. This noted French designer calls this triple-tier arrangement the parachute cape. It flares out very much in the back. The coachman-cape idea similar to this is frequently exploited on the new coat program.

A JACKET-BLOUSE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The newest thing in the way of a blouse is a jacket-blouse. Every sort of material fashions the jacket blouse from silver and gold metal cloth to gingham. The jacket-blouse of bright velveteen is especially smart. So also are those fashioned of plaid woolen or taffeta. A new note in a plaid taffeta blouse and beret ensemble is struck in the model pictured. The vogue for metal-shot fabrics is emphasized in the gold and green printed taffeta which fashions this smartly up-to-date blouse and beret two-piece. The wide attached scarf and gauntlet effect at the wrist are quite new. A parting word—be sure your blouse is of the modish jacket sort, whatever the material which fashions it may be—that point is up to you

FORMAL NIGHTGOWNS MADE WITH TRAINS

For several months Paris has been cabling news about the new formal nightgowns, but no one seems to have taken them seriously in America until very recently. Now it's gotten to the point where young things announce that their splendid new evening dresses are really nightgowns and were bought as such.

There are some of these, however, which are unmistakably nightgowns and can't possibly be worn to the theater, but are still so formally lovely they will take your breath away. Many of them come with trains and still more with jackets or long coats of their own. Lace is being used on them in profusion.

Knitted Evening Mittens Will Keep Hands Warm

Mittens for evening wear with formal gowns are predicted for this winter, especially if the thermometer drops zero. The mittens are designed to go over fine suede or glove gloves and may be either hand-knitted or of simulated hand-knitted wool. They may be richly colored like Czech peasant gloves or cream or yellow mercerized string. Knitted silk or cotton velvet in bright colors may be used for these mittens.

Double Fox

A new and novel way to wear your double fox is to have it snapped onto your plain coat. Adjust it close around the throat and let the rest snap on the edge of the coat and extend to the hem. It is thus removable and can be worn as a scarf as well.

Aquarium Bracelets

Aquarium bracelets are being worn by fashionable London women. They are made of thick glass with what appear to be tiny fish "swimming" in them.

Economy in Wise Use of Dye Pot

Renovating Fall Draperies Comparatively Easy Procedure.

In the season of renewing fall draperies for winter use not all pocketbooks permit of indulging in purchase of new goods. If the draperies are sound, but faded, the problem is not too difficult. Change can be effected by use of the dye pot, even if not in the hands of an expert. Or a cheap fabric in white can be bought and colored.

To dye fabrics an even shade is not a matter to be dismissed lightly. If the goods are to bear the close scrutiny which is accorded to dress materials. But curtains, partly because they hang in folds, and partly because the light behind them helps to distribute the color, can be successful to a greater degree in amateur hands.

Soap dyes do not demand the washing of the material beforehand, but it is not a bad rule to follow, with all dyes, that material dyes better when clean, or at least relieved of its greatest burden of dust. A plunger, such as is used in washing blankets, is recommended. A wooden spoon or stick for stirring the goods in the dye pot is needed.

Excellent instructions are to be found on the packages of dyes, but there are others, more personal which come only from the experienced. Wear an old dress, and a pair of stockings that can't be harmed. Dye is sure to splash on them. If your shoes are good, wear rubbers, as they, too, will get marked in transferring the newly dyed fabric from pot to line, or wash tub to pot. Dip and dry a piece of the fabric before dipping the article. Have the right kind of dye for your goods.

Curtains, if somewhat streaked, are not beyond use, but if they come out actually different shades their beauty is doubtful. To avoid this mishap get this feature of dyeing clearly in mind. A solution becomes weaker with every article dyed in it. Naturally the goods takes up the dye, and any moisture in goods diminishes the strength of the dye. Make a larger quantity of dye than is to be used on the first pair or first two pair of curtains. Measure it, so many cups to the gallon, and throw away the weakened dye solution after the first lot is dipped. Mix the next quantity in the same proportion and use the same number of curtains.

Be sure to give the dyed curtains clear line space. Have nothing near them they can mark. Dry them opened up, not folded over the line. Iron while damp. This process is called "refinishing." One woman known to the writer re-dips her living room draperies a dark rich brown every year. She makes no work of it at all.

Forests of the Sea

Trunks of seaweed 18 inches in circumference, with branches and leaves like a tree, were discovered recently by a botanist in the Antarctic ocean. notes a writer in Tit-Bits Magazine. It remains to be proved whether they can be used as firewood.

Unmapped jungles of vegetation lie beneath the waves. Dr. William Beebe, the marine explorer, glimpsed a real forest of seaweed when investigating, in his bathysphere, the continental shelf of the coast of Chile. Some of the stems towered to a height of 600 feet, three times higher than the world's tallest tree. Inexperienced voyagers often mistake the enormous drifting masses of seaweed that appear at their thickest every summer in the Sargasso sea for islands. Their total weight on the surface has been scientifically estimated at 20,000,000 tons, while another 54,000,000 tons is said to lie below.

Why Doctors Favor a Liquid Laxative

A doctor will tell you that the careless use of strong laxatives may do more harm than good.

Harsh laxatives often drain the system, weaken the bowel muscles, and even affect the liver and kidneys.

Fortunately, the public is fast returning to laxatives in liquid form. The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can thus be regulated to suit individual need. It forms no habit; you needn't take a "double dose" a day or two later.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin gently helps the average person's bowels while nature is restoring their regularity. Why not try it? Some pill or tablet may be more convenient to carry. But there is little "convenience" in any cathartic which is taken so frequently, you must carry it with you, wherever you go!

Its very taste tells you Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is wholesome. A delightful taste, and delightful action. Safe for expectant mothers, and children. At all druggists, ready for use, in big bottles.

Plenty Of Good Minds In Next Legislature

By J. W. MARCHBANK

With the state election only a little more than a week away, interest is increased in the coming session of the Legislature in January. It is quite a while since the first editorial was published in this column in regard to bringing the legal status of racing up to a better standard. One principal change, as readers recall, we must have, and that is reducing the commission on pari mutuel pools from twelve to nine per cent.

Confidence is widespread that the caliber of the personnel of the state law making body will be the best in years. Both the Senate and the Assembly will have members of the broadest vision. The top flight may be depended upon, according to the outlook, to see vital problems from the point of view of social service, that test of all legislation in this period of rapidly expanding economic forces.

The nation is proud of its Johnson's, Borahs, Norrises and men of that kind, possessed of the highest sense of duty to the welfare of their country. California has holdovers in the Senate of a type deserving of similar laudation and newcomers are equally well grounded in the necessity of making statutes for the upbuilding of the whole state.

This is a time of reconstruction and racing is a factor in that highly important work from two angles—the sport for itself and as a part in social upbuilding.

Tourist organizations are enthused at the prospect of a portion of the "take" being used for promotion purposes. My plan provides for six per cent of the nine per cent to go to the racing association, one and one-half to the state and one and one-half to a fund for a purse or purses for a big race or a series of races to advertise the state. Under my scheme the state is really getting the benefit of three per cent, with half going to the well established uses of the support of agriculture and fairs. The other half is devoted to promotion that should bring millions of dollars into the various sections of California.

OLD HISTORICAL DATA OF THE COLMA VALLEY

Incidents of Pioneer Days and Characters Recalled For Our Readers

(By An Old-Timer)

That the largest and most progressive and desirable suburban district of the great San Francisco is sitting pretty right here is a fitting reward to the pioneers who put forth their best efforts. 'Tis no discredit to the earliest pioneer pathfinders, who really paved the way, to especially mention the leading spirit of those public spirited men, and women, too, who as refugees from the great earthquake and fire that destroyed the largest portion of San Francisco on April 18, 1906, joined their efforts with the real actors who were already here—composed of such men as R. S. Thornton, John D. Daly, James T. Casey, Edward Freyer, E. Squire, Silvio Belli, Matthew Grady, Caleb Coakley, Antonio Sturla, Henry Ward Brown, John W. Marchbank and others.

The outstanding activity of Mr. Marchbank is especially pointed out at this time, not only because of his kind acts to those in need, for he also possessed a faculty as a leader. In conjunction with such men as John D. Daly, Assemblyman Henry Ward Brown, Supervisor Casey, Frank B. Woodhouse and Edward Freyer, he put in motion such valuable public-spirited advantages as securing the extension of the five-cent street car limit from Sikes avenue to the "top of the hill," that has saved and will ever continue to save our citizens many thousands of dollars; he led in the establishment of the Daly City Bank; was prominent in inducing the State Highway Commission to put in the first unit of the California state highway, from Sikes avenue to San Bruno.

There is an individual act which Mr. Marchbank fathered, and that was the building of a library here that is second to none other in San Mateo County. 'Twas many weeks in building and was shrouded in mystery. No one seemed to know who was constructing the building or for what purpose it was to be used until its completion, when it was learned that "Jack" Marchbank had built it in honor of his friend and co-worker, Mr. Daly, to be known as the "John D. Daly Library." Under the efficient care of Mrs. Jaen O'Rourke, who has been the librarian from the beginning, this library has generally improved until now it is noted as being practically perfect in every department from fiction to research works, that is practically utilized to the best advantage by the students of every grade of both the high and grammar schools. The citizens are proud of their library and grateful for the goodness of the one who donated it for their use.

The Presbyterian Church, in the Crocker Tract, was dedicated October

10, 1909, the services being conducted by Rev. D. A. Mobly, D. D., of the Westminster Church in San Francisco. This pretty little church on Manchester street was the pioneer church in the Crocker Tract, with Rev. A. R. Willis as pastor.

Charles P. Lambert, proprietor of the F street marble works, was an appreciated contributor of local news for the Record.

Caleb Coakley, the weigher, weighed 150,000 pounds of cabbage as one shipment to Hayward to be made into sauerkraut. Another day four carloads of cabbage were shipped to New York.

Miss Mildred Allen and Art Doven, who stole a march on their friends and went to San Rafael, where the ceremony was performed, then went to Los Angeles on their honeymoon trip, October 9, 1909.

Saturday night, October 11, 1909, Mission Tract suffered the loss of three cottages by fire. They belonged to Messrs. Buttman and Thompson. The volunteer firemen responded promptly, but were badly handicapped for lack of water pressure.

Railway Agent G. W. Taylor reported that 219 cars of hay had been received at Colma in September, also twenty-seven cars of wine grapes.

A. Boni opened up an Emporium in Vista Grande on Mission street, near Lakeview avenue.

An enthusiastic woman suffrage meeting was held in Colma Hall, but there were croakers about the streets who "knew that women were crazy if they expected to be given their franchise."

An enthusiastic school bond meeting was held at Colma Hall, October 28, 1909, in which the bonds for the Vista Grande and Crocker Tract schools were unanimously endorsed. In all that was said, not one word of objection was made. The general sentiment prevailed to "Never vote purpose." The bonds carried by a vote of approximately 5 to 1.

(Editor's Note: Vote for the new school bonds, Friday of next week, November 2, 1934. One week from today.)

Keep Brakes Adjusted

Improperly adjusted or dragging brakes have a tendency to cause brake linings to become glazed, according to the emergency road service of the California State Automobile Association. All moving parts of the brake system should work freely if normal braking efficiency is to be expected. A good way to test the brake mechanism is to operate the brake pedal with the motor idle and the car standing still. If the pedal does not move easily or if there are any squeaks, something is wrong which should be corrected without delay.

Dragging Clutch

A clutch with gummed plates or discs, depending upon the type, often drags when disengaged, according to the emergency road service of the California State Automobile Association.

This dragging effect will sometimes cause the motor to stall at idling speed. The remedy is to clean the clutch plates.

Here, too, on June 15, 1776, Washington was chosen commander in chief of the Continental Army. It was here, also, that the Declaration of Independence was signed. The American officers taken by the British in the battles of Brandywine and Germantown, in September and October, 1777, were kept in this same east room as prisoners of war. Question: Why do we know Philadelphia as the city of "Brotherly Love"?

Answer: Because the treaties of William Penn with the Delaware Indians were so fair and generous, and were so strictly kept, that for more than a century very few red men were known to attack a Quaker. Prosperity resulted from every venture undertaken by the Colonists during the life of the treaties, and their principal town, Philadelphia ("City of Brotherly Love") grew with astonishing rapidity.

Question: Where is the tomb of the "Unknown Soldier" located?

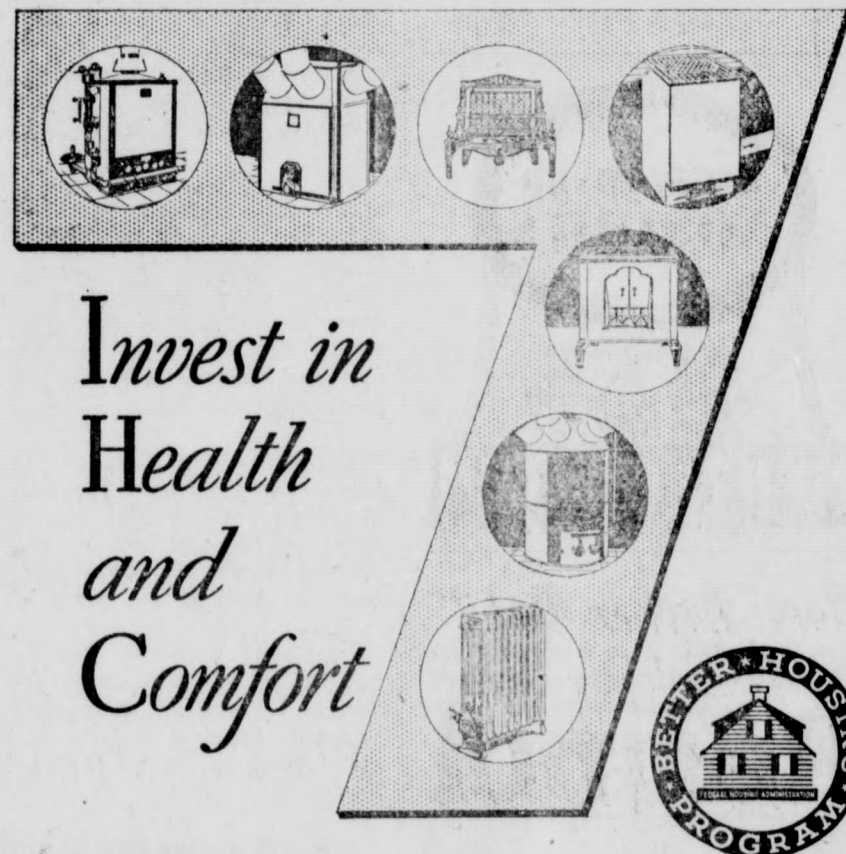

Answer: At Arlington National Cemetery, in Virginia, on the banks of the Potomac.

COLUMN OF N. R. A. FACTS

INFORMATION regarding the N. R. A. will be furnished each week by W. H. CLAY, Chairman of the local N. R. A. Publicity Committee.

"Enough progress has been made since mid-August to prove that the lows of the year definitely are in the past, and that the turning point for business has been reached," according to Dun and Bradstreet's Review for October 5.

The continued expansion of commercial loans would tend to confirm this feeling. For the week ended October 3, member banks in the Federal Reserve system report $34,000,000 in loans to business. This marks the eleventh weekly increase in the longest upward movement sustained in this case of bank credit in several years.

The August increase in machine tool orders, after a six months decline, also indicates the trend toward advancing production activity. The NICB index rose to 41.4, compared with 34.7 in July.

Meanwhile, another advance was recorded by the New York Times index to 73.7 from 73.7 the previous week. Resumption of operations after the textile strike brought the index for cotton cloth production to 61.7, compared with 45.8 the previous week. Electric power output, steel mill activity and automobile production also moved upward.

Settlement of the textile strike finds that industry in the most favorable inventory position in years, particularly as regards silk, wool and rayon, according to the NICB. Since retail sales of textile and apparel have been large, replacements are in order and a more than seasonal spurt in production is possible.

So far this year, over one billion dollars have poured into treasury vaults. This showing is 27 per cent better than last year. The continued increase in the number of small coins reflects the greater activity in commercial channels.

A striking feature of the RFC statement concerning their $5,000,000,000 of commitments since the beginning of the recovery program, is the $750,000,000 which have been cancelled by applicants because of improved conditions.

Banks representing more than 75 per cent of the total commercial bank resources of the country have accepted contracts of insurance in order to make modernization loans, the Federal Housing Administration announces. A day by day increase of 40 per cent in the value of applications is reported, with $4,500,000 in loans to about 10,500 people already approved.

Due to the Federal Housing Program, the hardware trade regards the fall outlook as the best in five years. Unit production for the year to date has averaged 20 per cent to 30 higher than in the 1933 period. Sales during the first six weeks of 1934 were 40 per cent to 50 per cent higher than in the 1933 period. The output of farm hardware has shown an average increase of 50 per cent. The movement of goods in the builders' division is now gaining from week to week, while sales of paints, plumbing supplies, furnaces and heating equipment give promise of making expansion for the last quarter of 1934 the largest in several years.

The sustained strength of consumer buying is evidenced by the continuing gains in retail trade throughout the country since mid-August. Particularly marked improvement is now noted in the sale of fall apparel, furniture and shoes. Dun and Bradstreet's reports that large wholesale and mail-order houses are benefiting from the improved incomes of farmers, particularly in non-drought areas. Retailers in these sections report sales gains of 30 per cent to 50 per cent over last year's in many items, and are ordering accordingly.

A survey of the radio industry reveals that 1934 is likely to close with the industry as a whole in the best position in five years. During the first six months of this year, both wholesale and retail volume rose 50 per cent to 75 per cent above the 1933 comparable level, and prospects for the second half of 1934 indicate that sales for the year will total 4,550,000 sets, breaking the record of the peak year 1929. The decided improvement in general economic conditions is credited by Dun and Bradstreet as the largest single factor in this remarkable showing.

The rising demand for motor trucks has been the strongest feature of the automobile market during recent months. The Wall Street Journal reports. In the first eight months of 1934, domestic truck sales were 79 per cent higher than in the like period of 1933, while passenger car sales increased 35 per cent. The same trend is noticeable in automobile exports. In the first half of this year, exports of trucks were 206 per cent above the 1933 period, against a comparable gain of 136 per cent for passenger cars.

Reports from the Bell Telephone system for 1934, showing a net gain of 170,000 telephones during the year and an increase in operating revenues of about 4 per cent. Profits have also recovered, increases in net operating revenue ranging from 7 per cent to 11 per cent for several Bell companies.

One major manufacturer of electric refrigerators experienced larger sales in the year ended September 30 than in any preceding year in its history.

A survey of the grocery trade reveals that the increase in the consumption of foods, which started last year, has proceeded at a more rapid rate thus far in 1934. Dollar sales of wholesale and retail grocery concerns for the first nine months of 1934, have advanced from 10 per cent to 20 per cent over the corresponding period of 1933. Manufacturers of breakfast cereals are reporting one of the best seasons in years, and good headway is being reported by flour mills, coffee roasters and sugar refiners. Leading units in the grocery trade had larger earnings in the third quarter of this year than in the second, and the cash position of some of the large distributors is reported to be the best achieved since 1930.

The Bureau of Mines reports that domestic consumption of gasoline for August was 4 per cent higher than in the same month last year and only slightly under the record reached in August 1931. For the first eight months of this year, a gain of 7 per cent is recorded over the 1933 period.

Business failures in September numbered 790, a decline of 14.9 per cent from the August total. This represents a decline of 29.2 per cent over September, 1933, and of 63.8 per cent over September, 1932.

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE WEEK

Board Of Seven Directs NRA: On September 28, the National Industrial Recovery Board, created by Presidential executive order took over the duty of administering NRA. The Board is composed of S. Clay Williams, Chairman; Leon C. Marshall, Executive Secretary; A. D. Whiteside, Sidney Hillman and Walton Hamilton. Blackwell Smith and Leon Henderson were named Legal Adviser and Economic Adviser respectively, to serve ex-officio as members of the board. At its first meeting the board announced that there would be no drastic changes in either policy or personnel but that such alterations as experience proves to be necessary will be developed gradually. It reappointed Col. George A. Lynch as Administrative Officer, empowering him to sign such documents as do not require the personal signature of the President, and to continue supervision of the entire administrative machine of NRA.

Industrial Emergency Committee To Advise President: By another executive order the President designated the I. E. C., among its other duties, to determine, with his approval, the general policies of the administration of the Recovery Act. This supervision of general policy is intended to be in the nature of coordinating NRA's activities with those of other departments and agencies of Government. To this committee, the President named; Donald R. Richberg, Director; S. Clay Williams as Chairman of the Recovery Board; Secretary Ickes, Secretary Perkins, Farm Administrator Davis and Relief Administrator Hopkins.

Advisory Council Named: One of the first acts of the National Industrial Recovery Board was the naming of an enlarged Advisory Council to absorb the functions of the Assistant Administrator for Policy, which office was heretofore held by the Acting General Counsel of NRA. This Council of nine is to operate under a special assistant to the Recovery Board, yet to be appointed, and is to consist of two representatives each of NRA's three advisory boards—Industrial, Labor and Consumers; and one each from the Legal Division and the Research and Planning Division. Its function will be to present to the Recovery Board definite recommendations on issues involving policy or controversy. Minority views will be accepted if the council is not in full agreement on any matter.

Two Special Advisers Also Appointed: The Recovery Board last week appointed Byres H. Gitchell as special adviser on the organization and functions of NRA Code Authorities and recalled to service W. L. Allen, one of NRA's first Deputy Administrators, to act as special adviser on general NRA organization. Mr. Gitchell has been serving as Administrator member on the Men's Clothing Code Authority and on the Dress Manufacturing Code Authority. Mr. Allen conducted hearings on the Cotton Textile Code, the first to be approved. He was for many years prominent in the steel industry and at one time was chairman of the board of the Sheffield Steel Corporation.

Industrial Truce Proposed: In his speech to the nation, September 30, 1934, President Roosevelt announced: "I propose to confer within the coming month with small groups of those truly representative of large employers of labor and of large groups of organized labor, in order to seek their co-operation in establishing what I may describe as a specific trial period of industrial peace. From those willing to join in establishing this hoped-for period of peace, I shall seek assurances of the making and maintenance of agreements, which can be mutually relied upon, under which wages, hours and working conditions may be determined, and any later adjustments

New Valves May Help

Leaving an order with the mechanic to replace any warped or burned exhaust valves is a thought that the car owner might well bear in mind the next time he contemplates taking the machine to the shop for a carbon and valve job, according to director of roadside service of the National Automobile Club.

These valves are subjected to extremely high operating temperatures and, while in the latest cars they are made of better heat-resisting materials, in some of the older models they go to pieces quickly under the strain.

shall be made either by agreement or, in case of disagreement, through the mediation or arbitration of state or federal agencies. I shall not ask either employers or employees permanently to lay aside weapons common to industrial war. But I shall ask both groups to give a fair trial to peaceful methods of adjusting their conflicts of opinion and interest, and to experiment for a reasonable time with measures suitable to civilize our industrial civilization."

Price Fixing and Production Control: At a Rotary Club luncheon in Chicago, October 10, 1934, Mr. Richberg declared that he did not favor the general use of cartel methods of production control and price fixing, but added: "Whenever, in order to conserve natural resources, or to maintain decent wages and hours and to protect a fair return on investments, or to prevent clearly unfair competition, it is found necessary to exert any restraints upon volume of production or price competition, two safeguards should be employed. The first is formulation and administration of such code provisions by those truly representative of a large majority of the volume of business and of the number of separate enterprises engaged therein. The second is a close and detailed supervision of the process of self regulation by competent and impartial representatives of the public."

Amendment to Lumber Code: NRA has approved an amendment to the code for the lumber and timber products industries intended to give the Lumber Code Authority more effective control over the transfer of production allotments. This amendment requires applicants for an allotment transfer to prove definitely that the transfer is necessary to prevent "undue hardship in any particular case." Its chief purpose is to prevent unnecessarily large inventories being built up by some mills despite the production control measures of the code.

Inter-Code Agency Approved: The creation of an inter-code agency of three members has been approved to investigate complaints of the codes for the coat and suit industry and the dress manufacturing industry. The agency is to consist of the chairman of the inter-code committee of each industry and an impartial chairman to be selected by these two. If they cannot agree on the chairman, he may be named by the Recovery Board. The agency is expected to forward its determination of disputes to NRA within twenty-four hours, and these determinations will become effective within five days after receipt, unless NRA disapproves.

Life of Aluminum Code Extended: NRA has extended this code for another trial period of ninety days, during which its operation will be observed further to determine whether its provisions are working in the public interest. Two conditions are imposed on the industry in granting this extension: 1—The industry is expected to submit a report at least ten days before this period expires in order that NRA "may determine the extent to which the code has operated to protect small enterprises from any alleged oppression or discrimination." 2—During this period, NRA will receive and investigate any complaints of unfair competition in the sale of fabricated products at prices constituting unfair competition, or oppression, under which wages, hours and working conditions may be determined, and any later adjustments

Carry Chains, Cautions Club

While it is not likely that mountain roads will be closed for several weeks, the recent snow and rains in the high country indicates that winter is not far off.

Motorists driving to or through the mountains are urged by the touring department of National Automobile Club to be prepared for unsettled weather during the season.

Chains should be carried, or rope, as such precautions may be the means of preventing serious accidents.

Got Her Lock of Hair, but Not Paderewski's

Paderewski has, like many another notability, undergone the ordeal of complying with autograph hunters' demands for signatures. But the famous pianist, if we may judge by what is said to have happened on one occasion, draws the line at the distribution of mementoes in the shape of samples of his beautiful hair, albeit gifted by nature with a profusion of that article.

It was when he was visiting America that a well-known society woman had the audacity to hand through the window of his private car a gushing epistle, winding up with the request for "a lock of hair." It is alleged that Paderewski's secretary replied as follows: "You fail to specify whose hair you desire. M. Paderewski, therefore, in order to avoid disappointment, has secured for you some fine specimens from his manager, secretary, valet, waiter two cooks, and the cat."

Sufficient Proof

"Are you an experienced secretary?" "Of course. I haven't bought my own lunch for years."

Hand in hand they went back to the academy, and the depression that nearly always settled upon Wilton's spirit when he entered the building pressed down like a black cloud—but a cloud whose heart was fire. They went into the great hall and Berenice paused beneath her father's painting.

"Here's my real guardian. Go and get Gordon Haskell. I will tell him here."

But Winton did not have to go far. Haskell was coming up the steps from the basement; his unusually sleek hair matted and tumbled, his eyes quite bloodshot. He stared steadily at his teacher of psychology.

"So this is the way you abuse my confidence—making love to your pupil, a girl not yet twenty?"

"I am twenty-eight," Wilton said. "Much nearer Miss Bracebridge's age than you are."

A welt of red showed in Haskell's face as if Wilton had actually struck him with a whip. "Oh, you scoundrel!" he muttered.

"Scoundrel? Haskell, you forget yourself! What is wrong in love that is open and honest? Since you are Miss Bracebridge's guardian, I am telling you that we intend to be married some day; with your consent, of course, if we can get it—without it if we can't!"

"Defiance! Open defiance! I will pay you your quarter's salary and you can go! Never come back! If you attempt to write to Miss Bracebridge or to see her, I'll take legal steps to prevent you—that's all."

"Gordon Haskell—you are wicked! wicked!" Berenice's white face and blazing eyes transformed her for the moment into an accusing angel. "If you think I'll give up Wilton Payne for a thousand guardians, you do not know me!"

"You've only known this man for a few weeks."

"No matter. Now you are not to turn him out of this place. He is a gentleman, a scholar, a man of honor. He pleaded with me to tell you at once—and came to do it—and this is your greeting."

"You need not go until Monday," Haskell muttered; "but then you must."

"I certainly shall go—and, I warn you, I shall also continue to see Miss Bracebridge; I am not penniless. Before I engaged to teach here a death in my family put me in possession of enough at least to keep me from depending wholly on my profession."

Haskell changed countenance. "Oh, well, it's not my intention to turn you off without a quarter's payment."

"I shall certainly take it. I could force you to keep me here as well, but I shan't."

Haskell shrugged his shoulders and walked away.

Berenice stole to Payne's side, "Wilton, we must get his consent. I'd go anywhere with you—share any poverty!"

"We'll wait for each other."

"Where will you go?"

"I'll ask Jerry to take me in—and those of my pupils who want to finish this quarter with me—can—with no more obligation to me than they had before."

"I am afraid—he will make it very hard for you."

"I'm glad I had nothing in my hand. I believe I would have used it on him. I can quite understand now why your brothers and sisters did not like him."

"Kiss me quite openly under my father's picture. I know he's blessing us."

They kissed. The great house was shrouded in silence! Wilton thought what a blessing if the footsteps of Haskell and Balder would die out from these walls forever, and the place be restored to a lost innocence and peace.

"Who's that playing the old piano?" Berenice asked.

"I don't hear anything."

"Listen."

He did hear then the far-off melody of a Chopin prelude. "Maybe it's Janet. I think she plays!"

"Oh, my dear—what shall I do in this great place without you?"

"I'll stay near by. I can work and study; and plan for the future. Life is all ours."

He told Janet and Arthur that evening. The two were in dismay. "Let us all leave," Arthur exclaimed. "Let's clear out and leave the brute and take Berenice with us."

"What good would that do, Arthur?" Janet remonstrated. "It would only make matters worse! No, I think we must stay and help her in another way."

"You're right, Janet," Wilton said. "I want to get to the root of the trouble here, and maybe I can get to the root much quicker from the outside."

Arthur looked earnestly at him. "You'll never have a finer field for psychological research. What do you think Haskell's game is?"

"He wants Berenice's money, I'm sure—but I think he's fond of her, too. He puzzles her, but she has never been actively antagonistic to him, as were the four other children. You generally love what you protect, and as her guardian I suppose his affection and his sense of power increased together."

On Sunday he called at Jerry Moore's and was able to make satisfactory arrangements with him. Wilton was to have a large bedroom opening out of the kitchen, and provided with a desk and a stove. "It will be good to have ye," Jerry commented. "He turned you out for courtin', eh? Well, I think Berenice done right to take ye—if you ask me!"

Wilton did ask him many things. His parting from Berenice had been ardent, sorrowful, defeated and determined! She had promised him that with Mrs. Denver or Janet for a companion she would make her usual visits to Jerry. Wilton consoled himself by talking of her with the old farmer, whose admiration of Berenice was as great as his own. He spoke one night of the Christmas tree. Jerry took out his pipe and stared at him.

"That ain't around yet?"

"Not now—he's burned it."

"Balder always did act queer about that tree. He lied to you when he said he saw it floated down. He brought it down himself on old White Star's back. White was a draught horse they used to have. After the funeral Mrs. Bracebridge sent Jerry up to fetch down the tent and other things. The tree had an American flag on it, so Balder—I was helpin' him—he says, 'I'll take down the hull business. They'll want the stand mebbe.' Why for he didn't burn it I don't know—but Balder's a half-witted loon anyway you take him."

Wilton thought the description accurate.

Apart from his separation from Berenice he rather relished his change of surroundings. The stark simplicities of life were always congenial to him; and the plain old farmhouse, the silence of the great hills, the bright procession of the winter days—it was an open and friendly winter—all combined to content him. Arthur he saw almost every day. Berenice every week at least; when Janet could not come with her Mrs. Denver did. The little housekeeper was no more reassured than she had been on the day of her arrival; the pupils were falling off, she said; the story of Wilton's dismissal had gotten about and he had many sympathizers.

"When the last pupil goes, I'm going," she announced one day.

"I shall be the last pupil," Berenice said. "You'll wait for me, Mrs. Denver."

They left the housekeeper and Jerry talking on the subject of fruit preserving and went out into the cold for their own conference, more important to them than the plans of the Olympians.

"Why did you say you would be the last pupil, dear?" Wilton asked her.

"Because I know that many of them are not coming back after the Christmas holidays; there are rumors about, since Sally Welford's story of seeing my brothers and sisters—rumors that harm might come to people in the academy. Now, isn't that foolish?"

"No, I don't think it is!"

"I mean actual physical harm, not queer feelings and fear."

"I was always afraid of it. It's like a hidden ferment that may break out some day in a catastrophe. Has your guardian mentioned me in any way?"

"Yes; he says you will have to leave the neighborhood after Christmas!"

"By whose authority?"

"Dear, why not move as far as Onteaga. Mrs. Denver could go down with me there on shopping trips—and we could meet."

"I'll not leave you, Berenice! I'll not leave Onteaga," he answered stubbornly.

"But he has threatened to stop my coming to Jerry's. He keeps the front gates locked now, and the way around by the lake is farther."

"Then we must write, when we can't meet."

"He looks over the mailbag every day."

"How about our own post—one of nature's providing? Here's a box ready—" he pointed to a squirrel hole in an old oak near by. "We can leave notes there—and if you can't get this far, Arthur will bring them himself, I know!"

"Wilton, we'll do that! My guardian has such an uncertain temper, one never knows what the next mood will be."

"I hope Arthur and Janet tread lightly in that debatable ground."

"They do, indeed. Janet and I are continually together. We watch the shadows as if they were alive. We sit by the fire and wonder when the wind will die. Mother Martha never leaves the top of the house now—but I have to watch her, for she creeps up and down the corridor. Once I heard her call out, 'I'm coming, Althea. I'm coming, my lamb.'"

"Keep close to Janet."

"I have to sit with my guardian sometimes—he seems so unhappy. I found him one day with his head buried in his hands, and when I asked him if he were in pain, he answered quite savagely: 'I'll make a bonfire of the whole place some day; it's been a torment and an agony ever since I set foot in it. I've been bound to the wheel of your family, the whole horrible tragedy descended on me.' I told him I would release him from his guardianship at once if he wished; then he accused me of being in league with you against him. 'You two are spying on me! I never wanted to bring these teachers here—but you forced my hand, as usual.'"

"I saw there was no use, Wilton. I left him to his dark fancies. He doesn't even take any classes now—says the sooner the whole farce is done the better. I dread Christmas!"

American Memorial on Hill Near Chateau-Thierry.

Prepared by National Geographic Society.

WIT the approach of Armistice day the patriotic American's thoughts turn back to that day in 1918, when the World war ceased, and to the men who gave up life for world peace.

Today 30,880 heroes sleep in beautiful cemeteries in the shadows of handsome memorials near the scenes of their war engagements.

In order that the gallant achievements and noble sacrifices of American troops might be suitably commemorated, the American Battle Monuments commission was created by an act of congress approved March 4, 1923. Gen. John J. Pershing is its chairman.

Eight memorial chapels, of singular beauty and dignity, now stand in the eight American military cemeteries in France, Belgium and England. Eleven monuments rise on the principal American battlefields and at certain chief bases of our operations. Two of these, one at Brest and the other at Gibraltar, have been built in tribute to the achievements of our navy's World war forces.

In size and design the battlefield monuments range from the towering Doric shaft, topped by a statue, on the dominating hill of Montfaucon, to the simple, effective monument near the town of Ypres, with its low lines blending with the plains of Belgium.

The imposing monument on Hill 204, near Chateau-Thierry; the majestic circular colonnade on Montsec, in the St. Mihiel region, and the other memorials in their size are proportionally representative of the strategic importance and greatness of the operations conducted in those areas by American military forces.

On many of these monuments have been inscribed the names of places where the troops engaged in heavy fighting. Orientation tables assist the visitor in identifying these positions on the landscape, and maps engraved on the walls indicate the progress of the offensives, as well as the divisions which took part. Decorative features also show the insignia of the divisions and larger units, types of equipment used by the American soldiers, and the coats of arms of the United States and allied nations.

Beautiful Chapels.

The chapels in the military cemeteries likewise vary widely in design. Each is a gem of architectural beauty and an enduring shrine consecrated to the memory of those who fell in battle. On their walls are carved the names of the 4289 men whose final resting places are unknown and of all those whose marble headstones bear the inscription, "Here rests in honored glory an American soldier known but to God." This inscription, prepared by the commission, was afterward engraved on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington National cemetery.

At each of the cemeteries beautiful and comfortable reception rooms have been established near to or in connection with the caretaker's offices for the convenience of visitors and those desiring information regarding the soldier dead.

All of the memorials were designed by carefully selected American architects of note, whose work has more than justified the confidence that the commission reposed in them. Each memorial, too, was planned with full consideration of the inherent beauty of the particular position it occupies. In every case infinite care has been exercised in the selection of the quality and in the utilization of the stone, marble, and other materials that have gone into their construction.

The general locations of the major battlefield memorials are enduring reminders of the three historic localities on the western front where American forces in large numbers engaged in active combat. These are known as the Aisne-Marne, the Meuse-Argonne, and the St. Mihiel battlefields. Only the last named of these areas was in Lorraine, that part of eastern France set aside in the summer of 1917 as the concentration area for the American army.

The British army had been established in the northern part of the long battle lines, near the Channel ports, thus protecting its direct line of communication with the British Isles. The French army protected Paris.

Yankees to the Rescue.

The American army was assembled well to the east of Paris, where it could be supplied by the railways leading from the comparatively unused South Atlantic ports of France, thus avoiding the congested area around Paris.

Early in 1918, while the American army was being built up in this section, the Germans commenced their series of major offensives. Available American troops were immediately turned over to the allied commander in chief to use as he saw fit. To help stop the enemy drive of May 27, which started north of the Aisne river, American divisions were hurried into line in the vicinity of Chateau-Thierry, directly across the German line of advance toward Paris.

Other American divisions took part in the great counter-offensive which began July 18, 1918, and within three weeks had driven the enemy to the north of the Vesle river. The American First, Second, Third, Fourth, Twenty-sixth, Twenty-eighth, Thirty-second, Forty-second, and Seventy-seventh divisions took part in the battles which raged in the vicinity. Of the 300,000 Americans participating in these operations, 64,000 became casualties.

Therefore, on historic Hill 204, rising just west of Chateau-Thierry, has been constructed an imposing memorial, with twin rows of majestic columns. The site of the monument commands a sweeping view of the Marne valley, in an area rich in fields of grain, sugar beets, and vineyards, flecked with quaint towns and quiet villages, crisscrossed by little streams.

Here devastation stalked with the progress of battle. Every town was a target for artillery. Farms were furrowed with myriads of trenches and subterranean shelters, subsoil was turned up over formerly fertile land, fields were implanted with barbed wire and sown with shell fragments.

Two Great Cemeteries.

There would be little in this vicinity in years to come to remind American pilgrims of the heroic deeds of their countrymen who fought in the Aisne-Marne region were it not for the monument and the two American military cemeteries.

One is located on the northern side of the hill on which stands the famous Belleau Wood. The other is near Fere-Tardenois, just north of the Ourcq river. The Oise-Aisne, near Fere, is the second largest of the American cemeteries abroad, with 6,012 battle dead resting within its confines.

The first operation of a complete American army as an independent unit in the World war was the attack of September 12, 1918, in the St. Mihiel region, which lies southeast of Verdun, between the Meuse and Moselle rivers.

German attacks early in the war had driven a wedge between Verdun on the Meuse and Pont-a-Mousson on the Moselle. The apex of the wedge included St. Mihiel, about 20 miles south of Verdun. This sector, occupied by the Germans for about four years, was the St. Mihiel salient.

A study of a map will show how geography generally determines the strategy of war as well as the commerce of peace time. The environs hills to the east and west dictated that the main attack should be delivered northward. The First, Second, Fourth, Fifth, Twenty-sixth, Forty-second, Seventy-eighth, Eighty-second, Eighty-ninth and Ninetieth divisions took part in the offensive, in which approximately 550,000 Americans were engaged.

The American Second army was organized in this region a month afterward, in October, 1918, and later the Seventh, Twenty-eighth, Thirty-third, and Ninety-second divisions undertook a general attack in the direction of Metz. The signing of the Armistice halted that battle.

Memorial on Montsec.

These operations, and the services of American units in the quiet sectors to the southeast and in the Vosges mountains, are commemorated by an imposing memorial on the isolated hill, Montsec, located a few miles east of St. Mihiel and lying close to the southern face of the salient, in the area liberated by the American offensive of September 12.

For miles around it dominates the landscape, yet when one passes between the pylons and mounts the steps leading to the topmost flight of the approach, the majesty and impressiveness of the monument assume even more surprising proportions.

At Thiaucourt, is the third largest of the American military cemeteries with 4,152 headstones. The graves lie in a large rectangular area, cut by tree-bordered walks and beds of flowers. At one end stands a cross-shaped monument, on the front of which is a compelling statue depicting the typical, youthful American soldier, with trench helmet in hand and side arms and canteen slung on his waist and shoulder.

At the north end, beyond the eagle-shaped central sundial of stone stands the chapel, an open, circular colonnade, or peristyle, flanked by a chapel room and a museum. The chapel interior contains richly colored mosaics, which include, above the carved altar, the Angel of Victory.

RECORDS WHITEWASHED

When John Vacko, headman of Lhots, Czechoslovakia, returned home he found that the walls of his room had been whitewashed by his wife, so he beat her. John told the judge the local council meets in the room, and to save paper, he had written the minutes on the walls. His wife's act caused the loss of an entire year's records.

THIS CHANGE gives Children a Chance

Perhaps you have tried nearly every sort of way to keep a child's bowels in proper condition, and failed.

Yet, almost any child who has been convalescing in a hospital, will usually come out with bowels working like a well-regulated watch.

The average mother gives any laxative the family may be using, while doctors give children a liquid laxative of suitable ingredients, suitable strength, and in suitable amount.

Make the change now to pure, California Syrup of Figs instead of harsh medicines, you risk no more violence to your child's appetite, digestion, and general physical condition. You'll have a safer, more satisfactory result, too. Those little upsets and complaints just disappear and the child is soon normal again. Try it!

THE "LIQUID TEST." First: select a liquid laxative of the proper strength for children. Second: give the dose suited to the child's age. Third: reduce the dose, if repeated, until the bowels are moving without any help at all.

An ideal laxative for this purpose is the pure California Syrup of Figs, but be sure the word "California" is on the bottle.

The Juniors are most active this term and our Hilda is sure planning a great program for them in the next two months.

At this time of the year the American Legion Auxiliary is very active with the disabled veterans in the hospitals, and Daly City Unit has already started its work for November and December.

The Value Of Some More Smiles
There is no room for sadness where we see a cheery smile; It always has the same good look it's never out of style

It naves us on to try again when failures makes us blue; The dimples of encouragement are good for me and you.

It pays a higher interest, for it is merely lent— It's worth a million dollars, and it doesn't cost a cent.

MINING NOTES OF VARIOUS SECTIONS

Damages of $14,500 are asked in a suit filed in federal court here by H. C. Davey of Cloverdale, against Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Hartsif of Lida, Nevada, the plaintiff alleging the defendants diverted water from Pigeon Springs, near Lida, for their homestead last June when Davey was ready to use the water, which he claims belongs to mining companies he owns.

The final shipments of motors and other machinery for the new 300-ton capacity mill at the Empress Mine in the Newtown district have been received and are being assembled under the direction of Robert Hathaway, a Grass Valley millwright. Additional men will be employed under ground for mining operations as soon as the mill is ready.

The Clayton group of eight gold claims has been taken under option by Thomas Ingersoll, Masonic Mine operator, who is reported representing the powerful London Exploration Company. Mining has begun, and shipments of the richer ore made to smelters.

Douglas Badger, president of the Stillwagon Mines, has announced the purchase of the Landecker Mine, near Placerville by his company.

E. B. Butler, a well known mining engineer of Los Angeles, will be in charge of the mine.

Work is scheduled to begin immediately. Electric power will be employed in sinking a 200-foot shaft. A road will be graded and the foundation for a 100-foot mill will be started. The Landecker Mine was a big producer in former years.

Leland S. Wincapaw, manager of the Cooley Butler mining interests in the Grass Valley and Rough and Ready sections, says good values are being taken from the Alta Hill Mine, northwest of Grass Valley.

Ore is being taken from an old gravel channel which has been opened from the bottom of a 150-foot shaft.

Building materials are being taken to the Black Bear Mine, near Rough and Ready, also a Butler property, where a ten-stamp mill is to be erected. The mill will be operated by water power.

Twenty-five carloads of silver-gold were shipped from the Tonopah and Divide districts in September by leasers. The output approximated 1250 tons.

BUSINESS MEN ARE BEHIND FRED BEER

Endorsing the candidacy of Fred E. Beer, San Mateo, and urging voters of the county to elect him supervisor of the Second district, a group of San Mateo business men and civic leaders today praised his record of public service. They cited his wide interest in county affairs, and said he will be a valuable addition to the supervisory board.

Speaking for the group, Frank P. Simmen, former Mayor of San Mateo and prominent in San Mateo affairs, said that business men generally, and other advocates of good government favored the election of Beer. Concurring in Simmen's statements were E. C. Lydon, J. H. Neustadt, W. J. Eva, R. H. Rose, Henry Caldwell and Albert Zimmermann, all widely known for their interest in governmental affairs.

Continuing, Simmen said: "San Mateo County now, perhaps more than ever before, needs experienced and competent officials to guide its government off the shoals. It needs such officials also to help get the new county charter working as we expected it to work, when we put it over."

"For many years I, and those for whom I speak, have known Fred E. Beer. He has proved himself a successful business man, and an able public official. San Mateo County will make no mistake in selecting him to represent the Second district on the Board of Supervisors."

Beer campaign workers report they are meeting a ready response to their appeals on behalf of his candidacy throughout the county. Their contracts reveal, they claim, that Beer should win the supervisory seat of the Second district by a substantial majority. The candidate himself is carrying on a vigorous campaign.

Surprise Bridal Shower

JURY PANEL TYPE DISCUSSION PROVES TO BE SUCCESSFUL

Seventeenth District P.T.A.
Hears Interesting Talk
On "Seeing Eye" Dog

Unit presidents and delegates throughout San Mateo county were present at the meeting of Seventeenth District, California Congress of Parents and Teachers, held October 19 in the auditorium of Burlingame high school.

The program, under the direction of Mrs. F. M. Stanger, first vice-president, opened with a talk by Miss Hilda Isles, blind niece of the beloved American poet, Longfellow, who introduced her "seeingeye" dog, Erna, and told how these German shepherd dogs are educated in Switzerland and the relationship between them and their blind wards. The speaker said that, with the assistance received from Erna's mental keenness, she is able to attend college and to take up radio work.

Dean Charles S. Morris of San Mateo junior college spoke on fathers' councils, and Pansy Jewett Abbott, county superintendent of schools, on "School Legislation."

A jury panel discussion was tried out for the first time and proved most valuable from the beginning to the close. Many informative points were brought out on home and school co-operation for child development during the panel and enthusiastically received. Those taking part were Dr. Elizabeth Balderson, dean of women, San Mateo junior college; Mrs. Emma Kalenborn, dean of girls, Sequoia high school, Redwood City; Mrs. F. M. Stanger, first vice-president, 17th district; Miss Dorothy Mills of McKinley school, Burlingame; Mrs. C. A. Andrews, San Mateo; Mrs. Floyd Huff, Millbrae, and Mrs. Franklin P. Nuting of Palo Alto, certified teacher of parent education.

Mrs. John J. Garland, president closed the meeting with a spiritual message and announced that every fine musical program will be presented at the next district session, November 16, by Mrs. J. E. Morriah, accompanied by Mrs. E. E. Lockerby, the recital being on "Folk and Art Songs of the Ages."

Attend District Meeting

Mrs. Eva Page, Mrs. Cathleen Brown and Mrs. Pearl Jones of the Woodrow Wilson-Vista Grande P. T. A. attended the Seventeenth District meeting held Friday at Burlingame High School.

The speaker for the morning session was Miss Hilda Isles, niece of H. W. Longfellow, the poet. Miss Isles, who is blind, spoke on "Seeing Eye Dogs."

At the afternoon session a jury panel discussion on "Child and School" was held.
